ROARING SPIRIT

The last years of the century at Scona have brought together a unique and amazing group of students. Although each individual is involved in different things, everyone still manages to carry on Strathcona's history of tradition.

Throughout the high school years, students learn about the world and themselves. New friends and adventures accompany the daily grind of waking up for classes starting at 8:05am. The defining of Strathcona comes in our motto: "Ut qui ministrat", which translates as "One who serves." Strathcona students strive to become the best students, athletes, and friends.

Scona's spirit and pride are what keep so many very different people together. With all our separate intentions, our ultimate actions are the same. And so, in this year with pride and spirit, Scona once again emerges as a very diverse yet united high school.

A NEW PRIDE

During the first week of school, froshing myths plague their minds. Visions of themselves pushing pencils down the hallway with their tongues haunt them. However, as these tales are proven untrue, the grade tens become much more comfortable at Scona.

As the insecurities about being short or finding their classes fade away, the freshman class has begun to explore their interests and form the friendships that will last a lifetime... With a record size class this year, 542 students, the grade tens exhibit some of the most diverse and interesting people in the school.

While these students have a lot to learn before the "kings-of-the-school" torch can be passed on, they already have shown their potential and school spirit this year. Throughout the year, they will grow to learn the true meaning of school spirit and Scona traditions.

RISING SPIRITS

Free from the uncertainties of grade ten... a year away from the stress of grade twelve... that leaves the grade eleven's to truly express our spirit unplugged! We will pull through high school one year ahead of the new math curriculum (we had problems with numbers last year but they mostly had to do with finding class rooms...) but we won't make it out this century. We are a year away from becoming the graduating class of 2000!

And so we prepare ourselves by building our spirit this year so that the "class of '00" will head out into the big and exciting world of post secondary education, setting Scona graduates of the 21st century off to an excellent start. Luckily we're not to that grad point yet with all the worries that accompany it. Being sophomores we are completely free to enjoy all that Scona has to offer.

LORDS OF THE SCHOOL

During the last year patrolling these halls, grade twelves tune in full blast to school spirit and learn the meaning of being a Scona Lord. No matter what they are involved in, everyone has one thing in common; they are leaders. After looking up to seniors for two years, the former freshmen class finally has a chance to rule the school. But with these new freedoms come the decisions that they no longer have "lots of time to decide."

Although they may get frustrated by the pressures from diplomas, post secondary entrances, jobs, and friends, these things all contribute to the memories of high school. While their lives will change, the times they have had at Scona will always remain concrete in their minds.

WELCOME BACK

For those who have yet to experience it, for those who forgot it over the summer, and for those who came rushing back to embrace it, there was Welcome Week. All of this excitement caused by everything about Scona.

We started the week's dizzying spin of events with a literally dizzying spin: the head on bat contest. The next days lunch had us inside for clubs day in the small gym. Anyone looking for a way to express their pride in Scona could find it there. Every club from Speech & Debate to the Ski club had information tables. There was a place for everyone. Hot dogs for 25 cents and musical chairs were the events for the next day. Finally on Friday the music moved back inside for Scona's Welcome Week dance to wrap up our back to school celebrations. The end of Welcome Week however, was only the start of another great year at Scona.

Jordan Golinowski, Jessie Amsbaugh, and Nicole Starway are glad to be back for another school year.

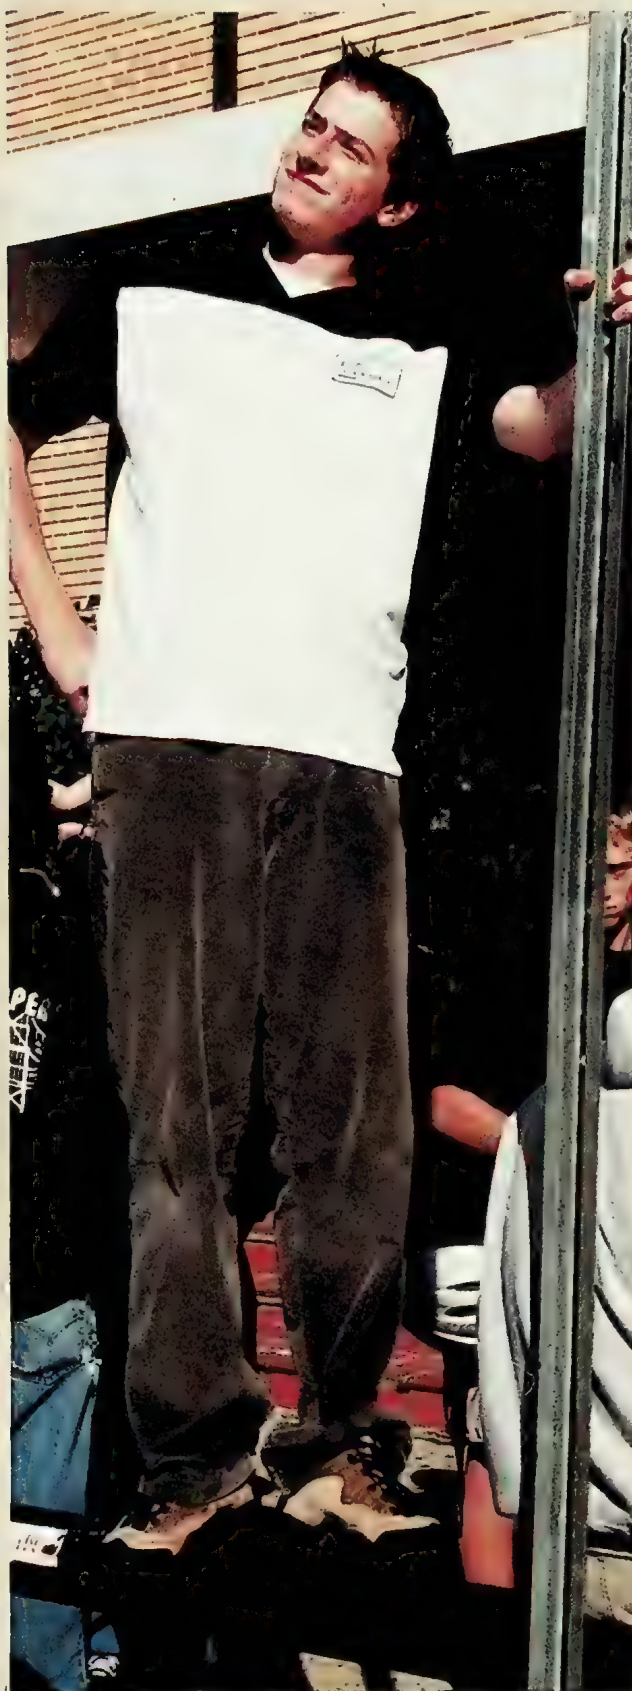

Kajtek Jaskowiak monitors the tunes for musical chairs.

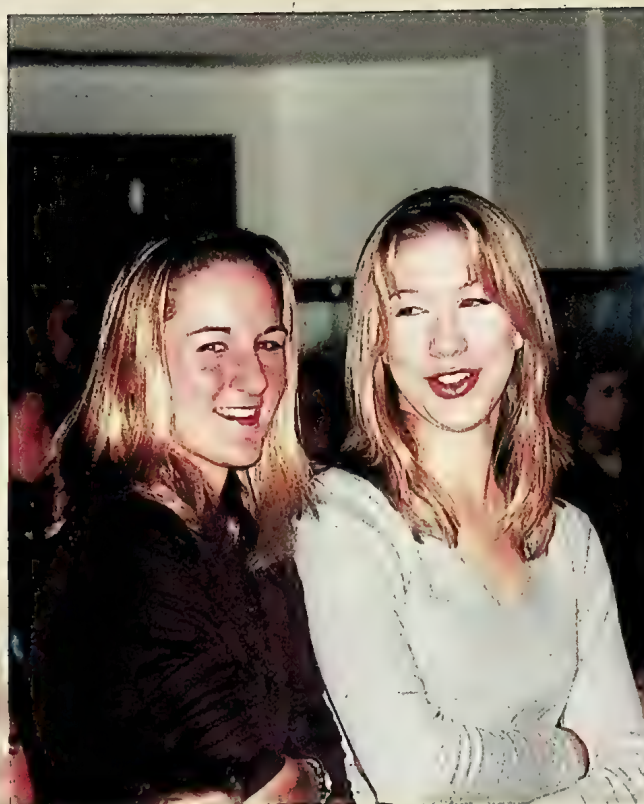

Nick Bender slurps up a plate of jello during the head-on-bat competition.

Kris Nielsen is pondering the new year at Scona.

The Scona swim team gett'en pumped for a swim meet.

TRUE GRIT

S-C, S-C-O, S-C-O-N-A let's go! Cheering and support for all of Scona's teams lived up to its reputation the first day of school. One of the renowned activities and also a tradition for this kind of support are the fan challenges. The first and second fan challenges of the 1998 Senior Men's Football season were huge successes on the part of all Scona Lords.

Now experienced in the art of the cheer, all Scona Lords can be seen and distinguished from other schools. Our fans can be seen passing around paints and felts to write an encouraging word or two upon a fellow friend. Scona loves to demonstrate its school spirit. The positive feedback from the players and the fans lets Scona Lords know that all of the cheering and support really does reflect the pride that ties the school together.

Conor McKaigney, Kajtek Jaskowiak, and friends bang on the drums as they keep the fans wild.

Gaylord demonstrates his enthusiasm in the leading of a Scona cheer!

ROARING SPIRIT

Students granted time off class gathered eagerly into the large gym to participate in Scona's awesome Pep Rally. Cheering for their favorite teams and clubs, students got a true feeling of Lordship.

Skits and demonstrations were performed by the cross country, swimming, volleyball, football team, SCAM, Scona Pride, L.I.P and other numerous clubs. The ever spirited Gaylord was there too to raise the cheering and feeling of tradition through the roof! The first cheers of the new cheer leading team were heard as they performed, the Senior football team's "stomping out" of Ainlay will never be forgotten and the jazz band soothed the ear with groovy tunes and recognizable hits.

Once again, our school has proven that we have one of the most diverse and unique student bodies around.

Tien Lung Tae Kwon-do demonstrates some force on stage.

Matthieu Gilbert strums his guitar for the jazz band.

The Student Union rallies some pep.

Students' Union continues to cheer on the Lords.

Monika Pawlowska cheers on the audience with school spirit.

The swim team races across the stage in another victorious race!

SPIRITUAL GROOVIN'

Welcome to the crazy side of Scona. At halloween, Scona students transform in to unrecognizeable horrors. This is a tradition that continued on this year with the annual haunted house, lunch hour dance and fashion show. With everything from pumpkins to garbage men and Mexicans to flashers, Scona students prove that you're never too old to recognize the kid inside.

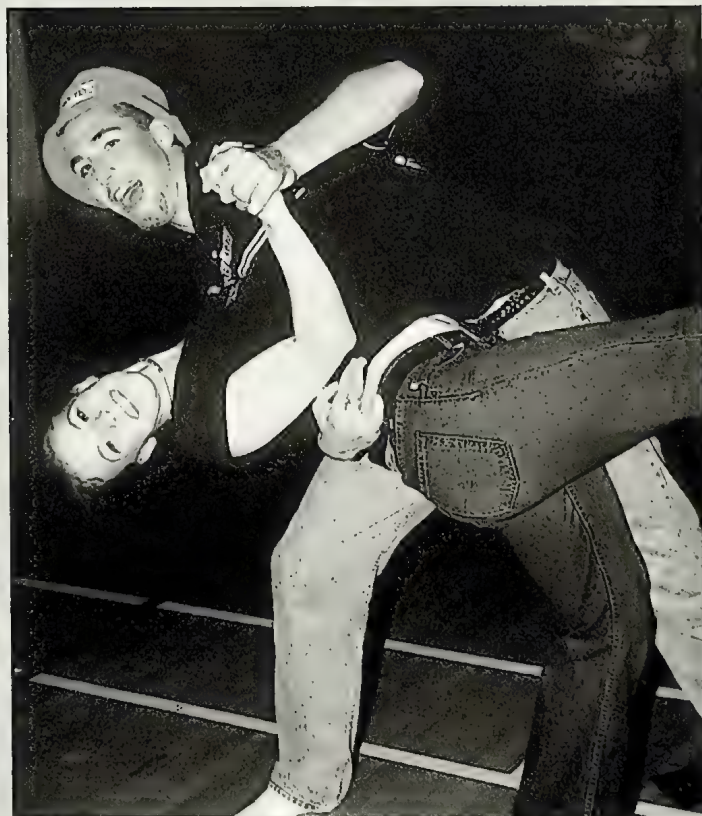

What better way to relieve the stresses of school then to dance them off. This year Scona students have moved to the groove of their favorite tunes at the first dance. They also got down and got funky at the Christmas and spring dances. Scona students find a way to make the school gym into one of the wildest parties.

Without much hard work and time spent by Students' Union and other volunteers, dances wouldn't be possible. Our thanks go out to all who helped.

Grade tens get into the Scona groove at the dance.

Jon Sharun enjoys a tango style dip with Megan Cromaty.

Brenna Kelly does the funky peacock.

Scona helps serve up some grub for the Western Days pancake breakfast.

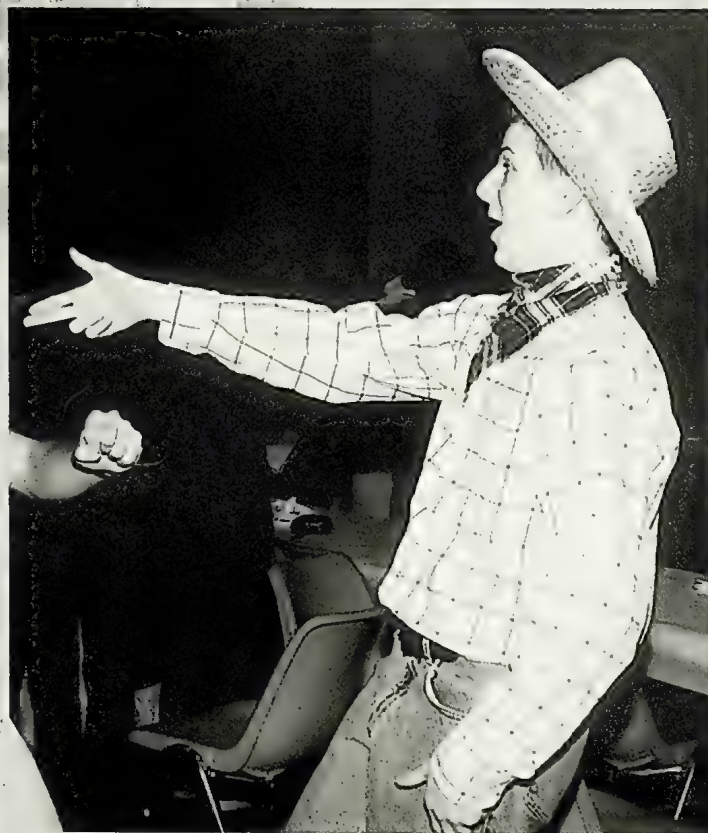

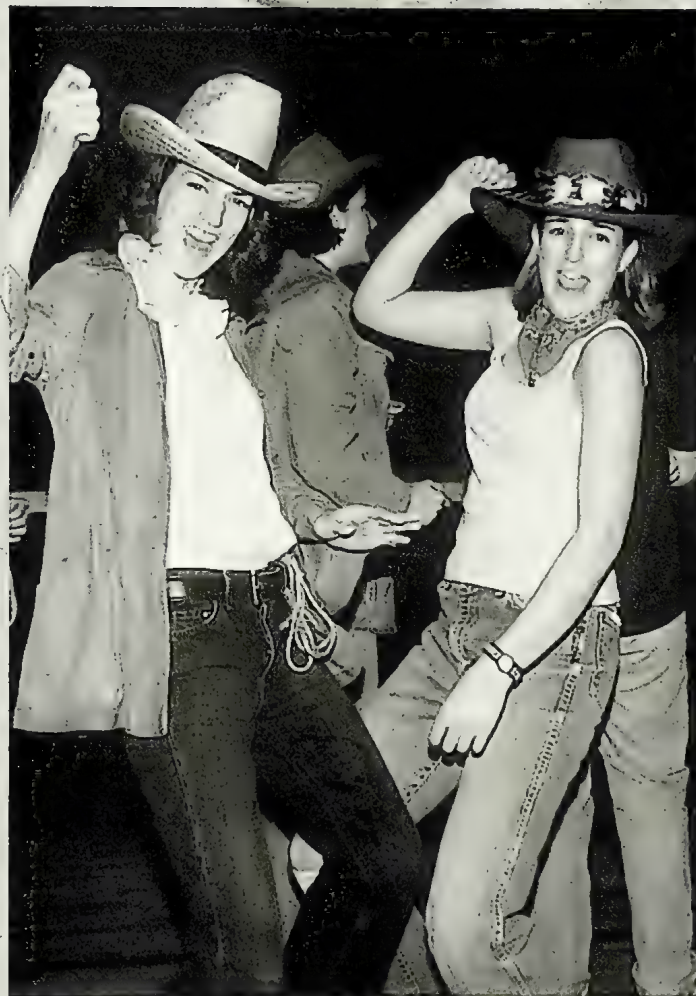

WESTERN SPIRIT

Very large cowboy hats, shiny belt buckles, boots with big heels and spurs. The only thing missing from Scona was horses. Western days kicked off bright and early at 7:30 am with a free pancake breakfast. Mmmm, all that syrup and delicious McDonalds "orange" drink. The atmosphere was set with western-style karaoke blaring those ole country tunes.

Why western days? Because, well, it's fun to get dressed up. Everyone brings out their cowboy gear from hiding in a closet and wears it with pride.

Pancakes, hats, boots, karaoke. All that was left was some classic Texas line dancing. In block two, students and teachers lined up in the small gym and kicked up their heels to the likes of Cadillac Ranch, the Tush Push and the Electric Slide. Our hats go off to all the organizers.

Sarah Hoyles and Jen Yates show off their country dancing moves.

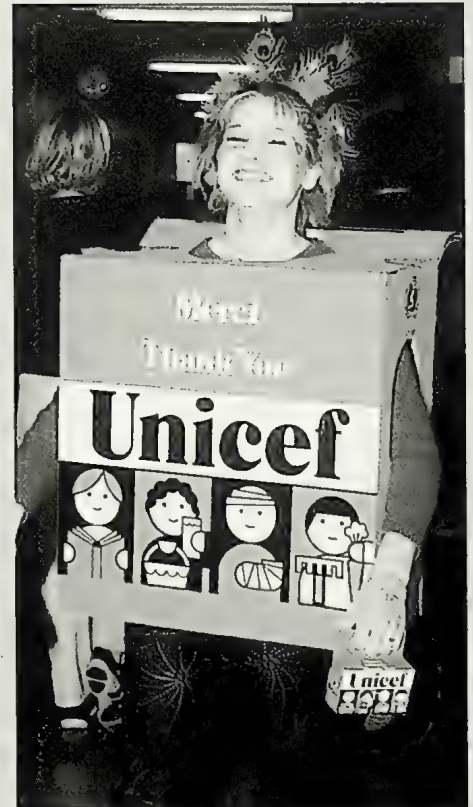

Who said high school students are too old to play cowboys?

UNPLUGGED SPOOKS

A blast from the past, a creature from your worst nightmare, and even a super star. All these things walked down Scona's halls for Halloween. The contagious fun loving attitude crept to the deepest and darkest areas of our school. In the basement the students found chills and thrills at the Haunted House.

Although the Scona students handled the frightful sights, many of the elementary children who visited were so terrified they cried. Still they were happy to share in the Halloween fun. In addition to sharing their haunted adventure, Scona also shared with UNICEF, contributing $500 to their Halloween fundraising effort.

Bob Kirkwood and Antoine Garipey operate on Talana Tree in the Haunted House.

Jennifer Forgues, leaping in part of the jazz performance.

Julie Mihók cheerfully collects money for UNICEF.

A J Chung leaps over fellow students in a Tai Kwon Do display at the Christmas LIT.

CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

"The Lack in Talent Show" gave shame to its title. Kicks were flying, skirts whirling, voices wailing; and violins buzzing. The Tiger Tai Kwon Do club did an amazing demonstration. AJ wrapped up the demo with a jump over eight (brave) students, to break a block in pieces.

Three dance performances also made mockery of the LIT's title. Georgia Severini showed how jazz was done, and Lauren Babcock tapped her way across the stage. Jessica Pecush, Jenessa Hanley, and other dancers gave such an amazing performance that the whole audience had dropped jaws.

Mr. Kulka, Mr. Klause, and Mr. Davies performed some real rock and roll, a Science department Christmas carol (played entirely on science equipment), and a mass sing along with the students union. There was also an acapella arrangement of the Backstreet Boys' latest hit and Killswitch.

MACBETH DID IT

After months of excruciating rehearsals, tireless and mesmerizing memorization and difficult stage direction, the cast and crew of Strathcona's yearplay were far from ready. Fortunately, through means of the script's twisted heirarchy and some cast and crew anxiety, Macbeth Did It was performed beautifully. Thanks to the supreme acting ability of the leads (Jordan Schroder, Sarah Hoyles, Marc Macolor and Hannah Wensel) the performances were acted flawlessly.

All those involved will probably be forever haunted by memories of the set creation, noon to six rehearsals and greasy makeup.

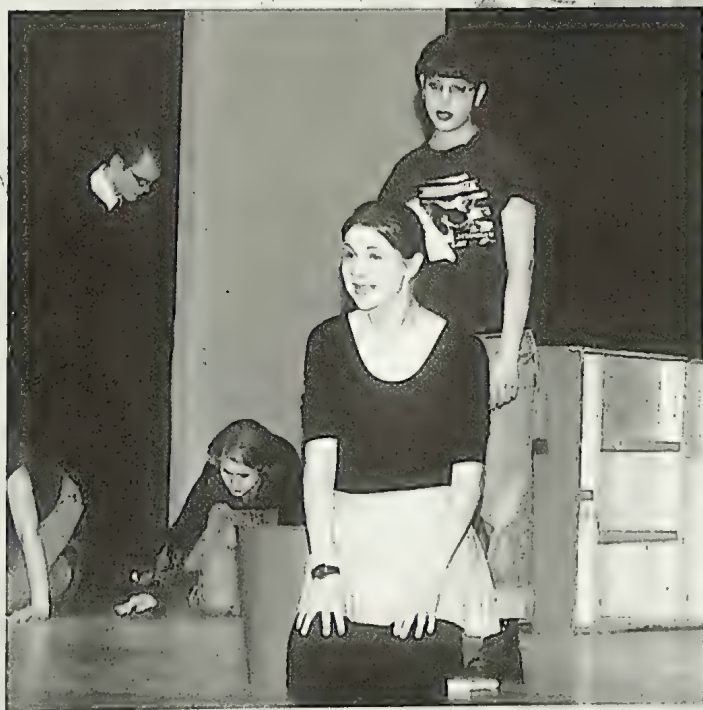

An enormous thanks to Ms. Blanchard, Mr. Beecroft and Ms. Green.

Hannah Wensel's character sticks her nose up at the year play.

GLOBAL SPIRIT

Every year, Social 20 and 23 students at Strathcona high school participate in the UN debate. Weeks of group work, research, and preparation lead up to a full day (away from regular classes) where students take on roles of UN delegates to nations across the globe. The students debate on a pre-determined topic, such as over-population and human rights.

Half-way through the day, all students get the chance to relax, with a buffet of foreign foods, brought by delegates of each nation. The effort truly pays off, even in some of the more exotic (and sometimes strange) dishes.

In addition to the debate, Social 23 students act as the press, interviewing delegates on their platforms on the debate topics.

The United Nations debate creates global awareness and interest in world issues. The debates of 1998 and 1999 were a great success.

NEIGHBOURHOOD SPIRIT

Good old Uncle Albert's...

Concert posters paper every available space around Whyte Ave.

Although many of the memories of high-school have taken place within our walls, a large portion of them will also be of Strathcona's surrounding community. Being located so near to Whyte Avenue, Strathcona students access plays, buskers, local bands, and numerous coffee shops. The city's heart of originality comes from the street and the school.

Local events like the Fringe draw students together with assortment of plays, outdoor improv shows, shopping, and food. On the average day, thousands of people pass through the streets of the Strathcona area to check out the newest styles and forms of expression. Shops like Divine Decadence, Gravity Pope, and Colour Blind cater to new trends set and followed by many students.

Other shops around Strathcona such as the L&K Food Market, Seven Eleven, and Georgio's are a frequent destination of the average student with an empty belly or low blood sugar levels...

Scona Lords have great pride in lives led both inside and outside of school. Many free hours are spent with friends, working, training for sports, and studying. However, our true effect on the world will not be known until decades down the road, when we can look back at memories of 1998 and 1999.

SPIRIT OF STAMINA

For the past 23 years, Scona has dominated cross country running in Edmonton and 1998 was no exception. The Lords started the season off with a blast capturing the Rookie Meet and maintained the effort all the way to the city finals where they brought home the City Championship banner for the 24th consecutive year. At the Provincial Championships the team also ran triumphantly, clinching their fifth consecutive Provincial title.

The cross country team is an impressive and intimidating sight. Over one hundred runners trained diligently day in and day out. But the dedication, sweat, and pain all paid off with another successful season. Along with the standard training sessions are the slurpee runs and pool parties that reward the athletes for their efforts.

Like many teams at Scona, people often try to diminish cross country's numerous victories as the by-product of numbers. Obviously these people have never tried to run up the hill at McNally or finish the grueling course at Goldbar. For those of us who have, the hard work and desire to continue Scona's tradition of winning the City Championship make each race all the more satisfying.

SPIKING SPIRIT

This year marked another tremendously successful season for Scona Volleyball. The Senior Men's Team enjoyed a respite from Edmonton's cold with a fun filled Hawaiian Volleyball odyssey. They also went undefeated in the league play and made it to both the City and Provincial Finals. As well they captured the silver medal in the U of A pre-season tournament and a bronze at the Salisbury tournament. On a somber note, this season was also the last for Coach Ken Klause, who has guided the senior team for over 15 years, capturing numerous City and Provincial championships along the way.

The Junior Men had an outstanding year. Strong play from several grade tens guided the team to three gold medals and one silver medal in tournament play. The future of volleyball at Scona is very bright.

The Senior Women worked hard all season. The players gained valuable experience and are looking toward even more success in the future. The Junior Women's team once again displayed much determination as they fought their way to the Premier Conference semifinals. Their strength will definitely aid the senior team in its quest to regain the Provincial Championships. All of the teams represented Scona admirably and continued the tradition of volleyball excellence.

TACKLING SCHOOL SPIRIT

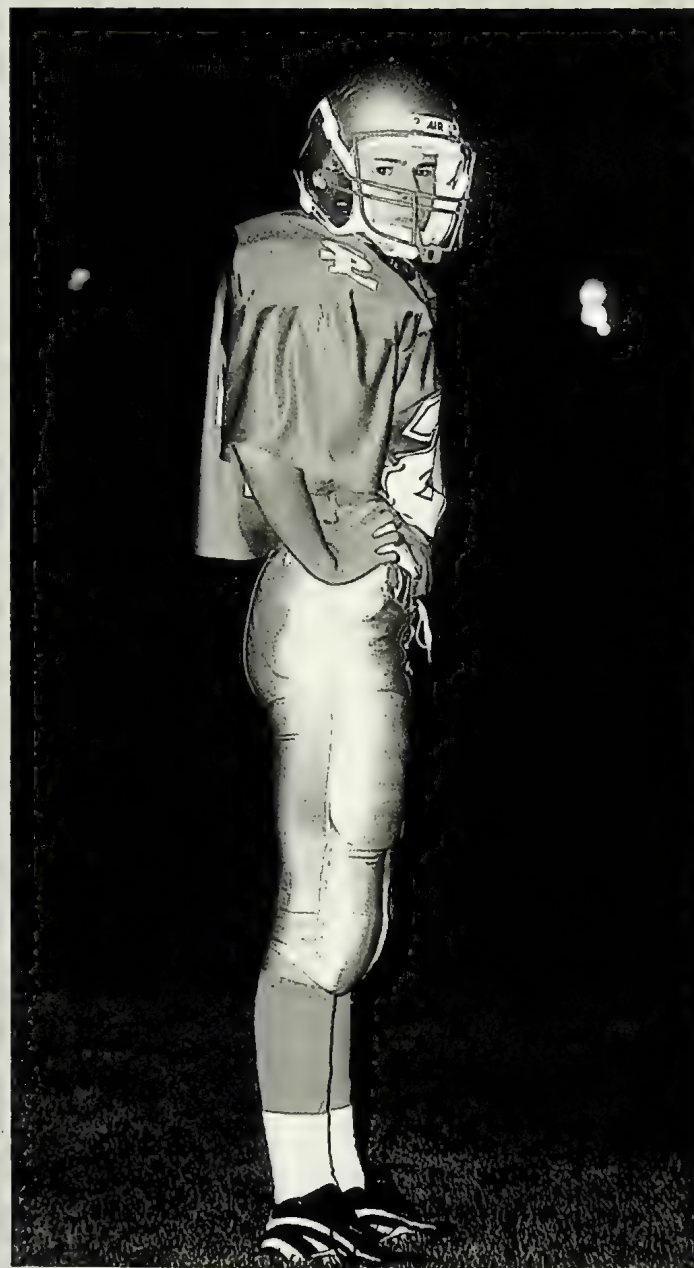

One of the newest, largest, and most dedicated teams in Strathcona is the football team. Made up of forty six guys, the team is notorious for their huge commitment.

With help from a couple of fan challenges, the football team was able to defeat both Ross Sheppard and Harry Ainlay, making school spirit soar. Scona's true spirit is defined at events like football games, where fans and friends gather to cheer on classmates.

Between "stomping out" Harry Ainlay at the Pep Rally, and wearing suits to school, the rough football team has made an amazing contribution to both the rest of the team and the school.

AQUA-SPIRIT

Well folks, Scona's swim team has done it again. It was a great year of dives, turns and strokes. This year's new-comers were introduced to the "We got the spirit" thing in rookie week. The spirit was felt through the season.

During all the busy practices and competitive meets, the swim team still found the time to raise money for Project India, a way to help send Indian children to school. With a huge team and teacher turnout, Scona managed to raise $900 for charity at the annual swim-a-thon.

After three months of long work-outs came the City Swimming Championship. Scona was ahead going into the event, with Ross Sheppard breathing down our necks. Despite all the technical delays, Scona still cheered the loudest, Magic-marked the most, and in the end, swam the hardest. Although it wasn't official until a few days later, Scona's swim team won their thirteenth consecutive City Championship!

UNPLUGGED BASKETBALL

The Senior Men's basketball team had a very succesful year, including a week long tournament in sunny California. Despite their last place finish and the fact that it was the middle of the winter, the team still managed to have a great time at the beach.

Other highlights during the season included third place finishes in Regina and Raymond, a second in a Calgary competition and first both in Leduc and at the Scona Classic. The best of the season were the zone cross-overs, as Scona beat Harry Ainlay and Ross Shepard on their way to a number one provincial finish.

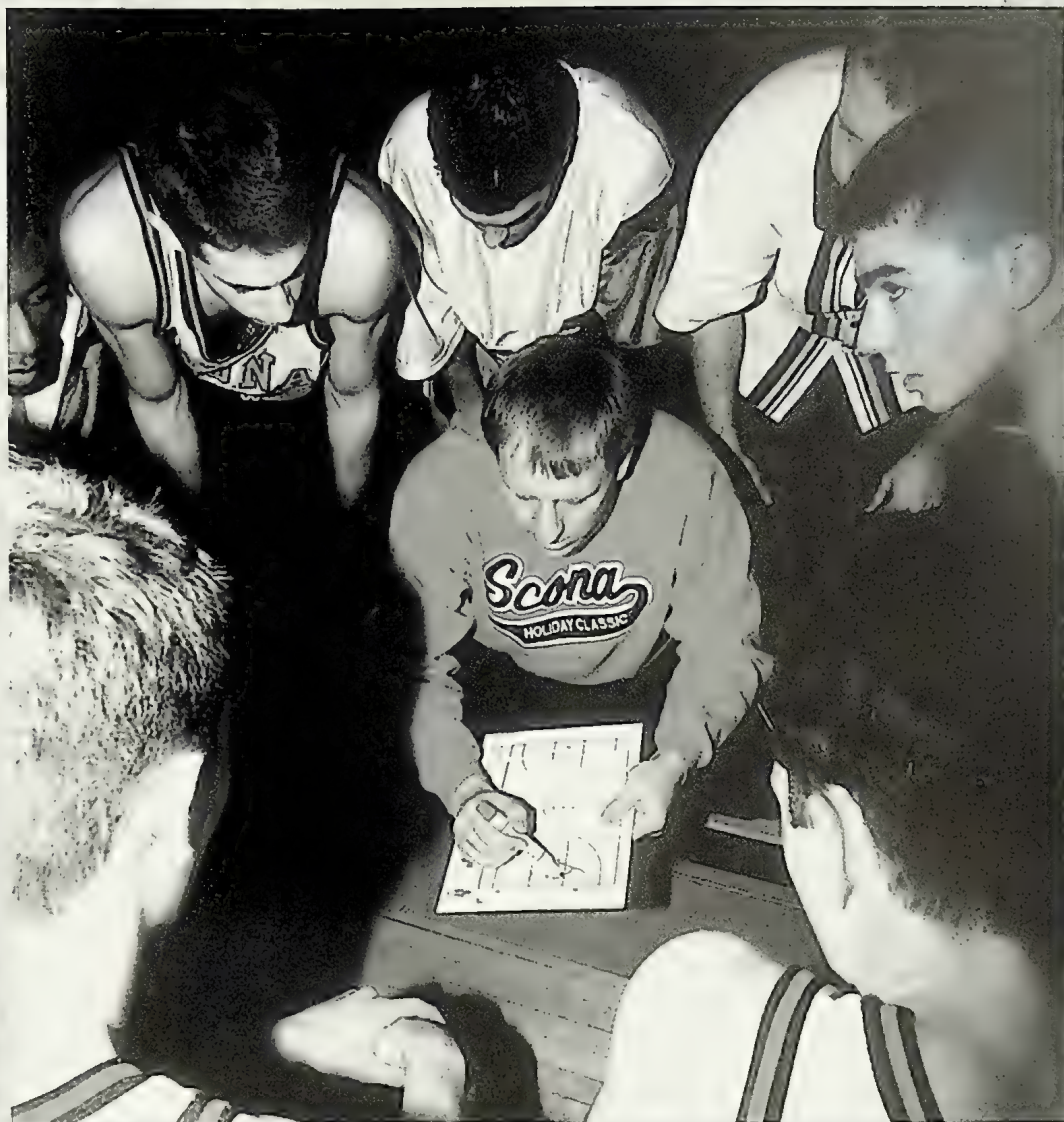

The senior men were characterized by crazy defense, lots o' three pointers and constant noise from the bench. Quote of the Year: "I am ease up!" by Taylor Wray.

Nothing can stop Ted Ani, not even the Sturgeons.

Macho, macho men! The Sr. Boys Basketball team prepare for a game.

BIRDIES & RACKETS

Starting the badminton season out in true Scona style, about 150 enthusiastic Lords were in the gym for tryouts. Although this pleased Mr. Cheng extremely, it also made his job very difficult. In the end, however, Mr. Cheng (with help from assistant Coach Jordan Miller) managed to select a very strong team to represent our school. Practices started in earnest and some of the team was torn between badminton and track but if they had enough energy they could pull both off. In the interschool play the team got to travel around and learned to appreciate our gym (some roofs at other schools aren't quite high enough). As city playoffs approached, Scona was in contention and in the end we finished with a gold for cities. Individual play began after seeing so many Scona players come so close to making zones. In the end Emmet Gibney, Anthony Wen, Tiffany Chan and Lindy VanRiper were the Scona players who made provincials and all of them brought home medals. Maybe badminton will become one of Scona's new traditions in excellence.

SCONA ROCKS

The Lords had another outstanding season on the ice in 1998/99. This year's team consisted of 28 members and formed seven of the sixty-six teams in the Greater Edmonton High School Curling League.

Congratulations to skips Ian Page, Mark Bleakley, Angela Misner, Sarah Pinto, Mark Kinghorn, Bob Kirkwood, Keith Barry, and their team-mates for a superb season. As well as providing strong performances on the ice, several members of the team raised over $900 for the S.P.C.A. at our first annual curlathon. A big thank you goes to Mr. Nelson for organizing this event. As the interest in the sport of curling continues to rise, so does the participation of Scona students in this sport. Thank you for a great year.

Dena Marcoux sweeps at the curling rink.

Shaun Bruns focuses as he releases the rock.

FIELD SPIRIT

Fist raised in determination, accompanied by laughs and smiles. Scona's boys soccer team combines spirit and strategy.

Ben Bennetts takes a Sprite break while Dan Hannah, Kris Nielson, and Keith Norby scrounge for some warm clothes.

Aidan Forth focuses off into the distance.

Heather Mackenzie skillfully eludes an opponent.

LORDS OF THE TRACK

The Lords couldn't have ended the final track and field season of the millenium better than capturing their 28th victory by not only sweeping all the trophies, but also destroying the competition! No other team was a threat as they seized their victory with a huge lead, more than three-fold the points of the runner up. It is amazing that almost after three decades the spirit, tradition, and legacy behind our team has continued stronger each year as its torch is carried on. However, this kind of product is not unexpected because of the effort rendered by each individual to do the best they possibly can.

All the hard work by the athletes also has a fun side as some workouts include 7-Eleven runs and the scavenger hunt. Watermelon day and the ever-popular pool party gives them an opportunity to relax, not to mention get back at some of the coaches (e.g. Calvin, Mr. Harle and his car). All of these great moments continue to build the spirit and tradition of a great dynasty that is Scona. A dynasty that will never fall.

EMICS

LITERARY SPIRIT

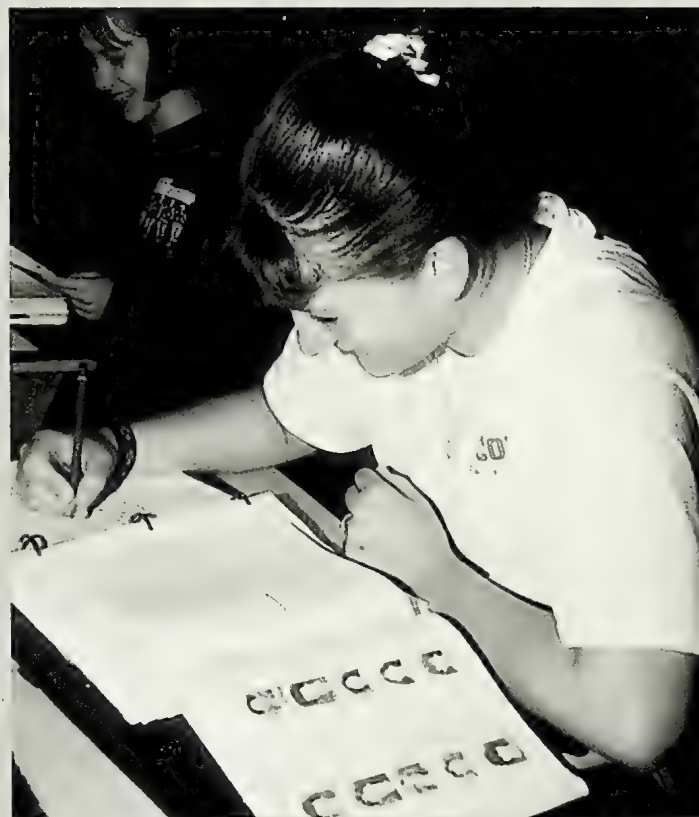

As we approach the millenium and the technology age continues to grow, communication skills continue to become more and more important. From interpretation of Shakespeare to analyzing poetry to comparing cinema works to the books they are based upon, English classes at Scona allow students to exercise their communication skills. Everything from English 13 to English 30AC allows students to work at their own best level.

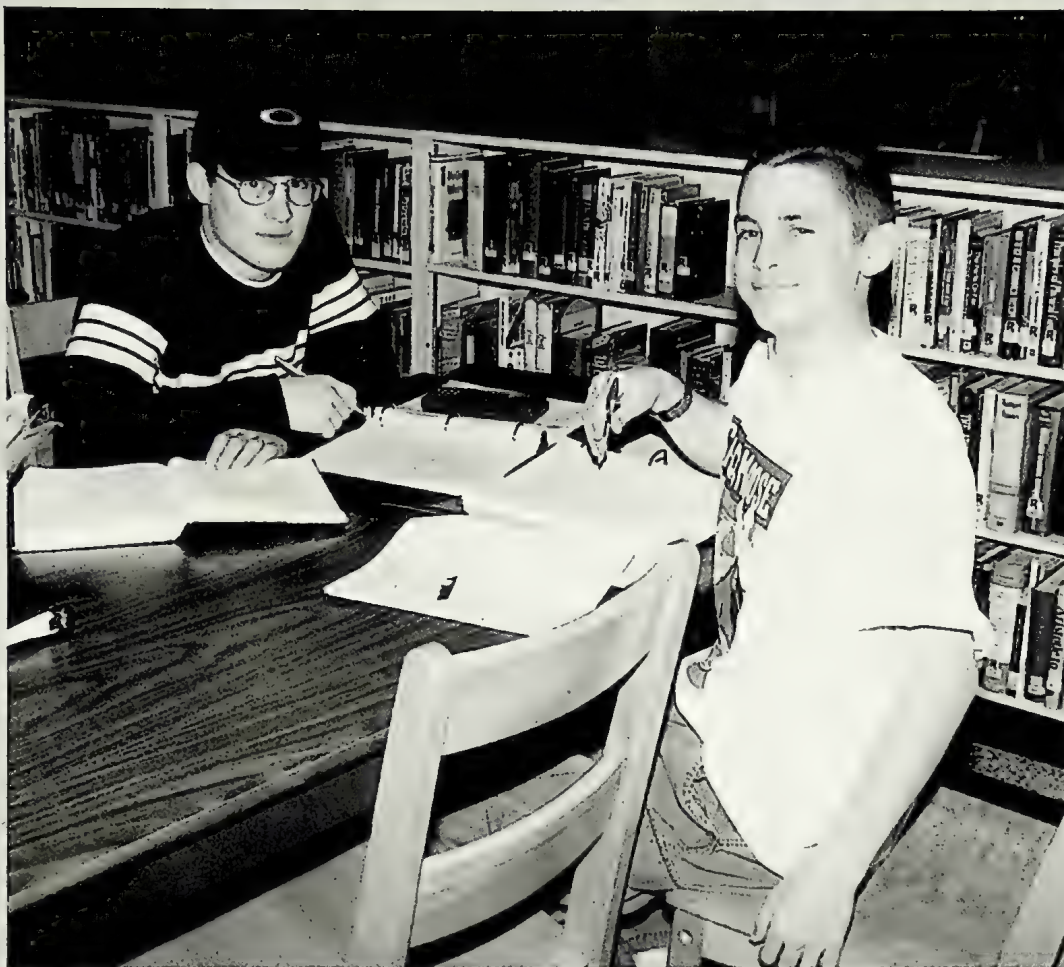

Al Pickard studiously completes an assignment.

Dan Sabo demonstrates marked excitement for English.

Shannon Brouwer secretly reads an old yearbook while pretending to be hard at work.

Henry Flynn daydreaming of big things in the library.

POLITICAL SPIRIT

From current events to history, Social Studies helps Scona students to understand the spirit that pushes the human race on.

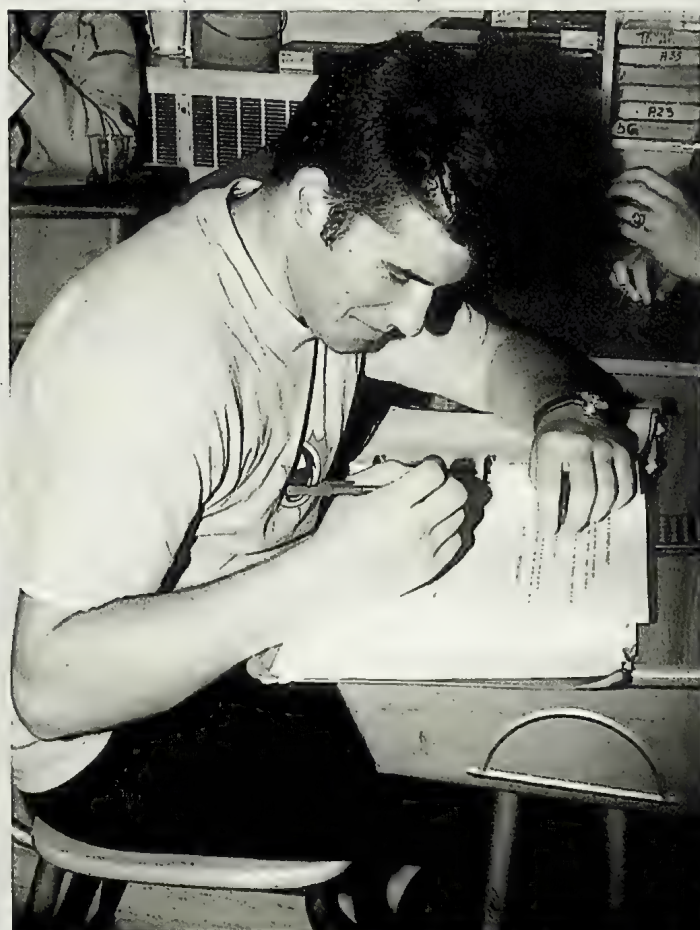

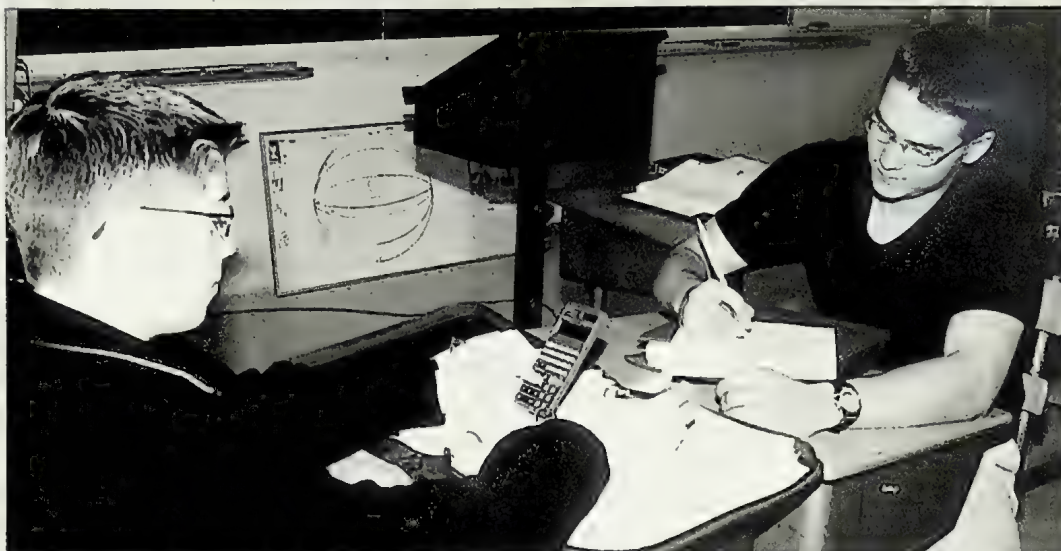

At the end of High School, students step into a position where they can influence the world around them by voting. This is something else that social studies, at all grade levels, helps to prepare us for. Many decisions made in our careers will have certain political effects. For this reason, students must understand the historical base upon which our country and global community were established. We must also be aware of the repercussions of decisions we make. Social studies teaches students of the way systems work, whether they be of the United Nations, the New York Stock Exchange, or Greenpeace.

Social 10 students listen to their peers attentively.

LAB SPIRIT

With every year of school passed, progressive generations of students have brains filled with more and more facts and figures. Crunching of numbers, memorization of elements and body parts are all required in math and science, the backbones of technological thought...

This was the first year at Scona with the new and improved math system. The grade tens were introduced to a whole new world of practical math. Math 20 brings more numbers and theorems. Finally, Math 30 brings the ultimate pressure on students to memorize locus definitions and trig identities. For the mathematically inclined comes Math 31, complete with calculus. Mathematics change the way students think from random sparks to organized patterns.

With the uncoding of many elusive equations and the legendary frog dissection, Science 10 is full of memorizing and discovering. Then comes the big decision... What part of science should I continue in? Specialization in chemistry, physics or biology brings a new world of learning. Then come the diploma exams. Loathed and feared, these bad boys are worth half of your final mark.

Math and science are both very important parts of the modern student.

CREATIVE SPIRIT

UNPLUGGED COMMUNICATION

While Strathcona is often painted as a highly athletic school, incredible teachers have also made visual arts, drama, and languages part of the scenery.

Mr. Drever has taken enormous steps to enable art students at Scona to prepare for post-secondary programs in that area. Improvement of arts-related skills is combined with art history and a change in the ways students perceive their surroundings, producing students who can look and think more critically.

Our drama program has also been widely successful, primarily through the work of Mrs. Blanchard. The Drama 30 One Acts were acclaimed at a city-wide competition, taking home many awards. The annual Year Play is also an incredible feat.

Languages offered at Scona include French, Spanish, German and Latin.

UNPLUGGED RHYTHM

The Scona Flute Choir: Kathleen O'Gorman, Sharon Lau, Jessica Eagleson, Keri Badry.

The music program at Scona is one of the best around. Under the supervision of Mr. Klausé, students learn the fine art of making music. They are soon to learn that music is much more than noise. It is a precise method of recording and stirring emotion. Students learn to appreciate the canvas for music, silence. They also learn that the quality and precision each individual sound that makes up a band, an orchestra, or a solo artist are vital to portray the emotions of the music effectively.

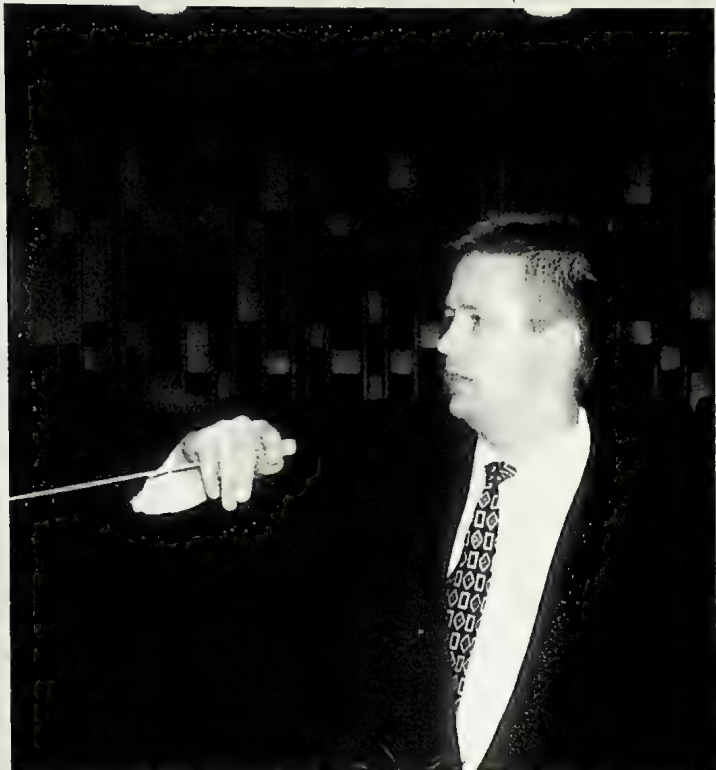

The music program at Scona allows a student to choose from a variety of instruments, and to take their skills and emotions beyond their brains. Making music requires a heart and considerable technique, the recognition for this instruction we give to Mr. Klausé.

Students have the opportunity to take their musical skills past the classroom in a variety of performances and competitions with various bands.

The Junior Band bristles with excitement.

Mr. Klause stabs the air with his conductor's baton.

George Haggis bangs away on the drums.

SPIRIT OF THE PRESS

Despite deadlines, a faulty computer and lots of missing photos, the yearbook crew has had a very successful year. Keeping in accordance with our theme, "Spirit Unplugged", we have taken a less formal approach to our book. Instead of focusing solely on our in-school teams, clubs, and classes, we have widened our spectrum to that of life in and outside of school.

A big thanks to Mr. Gerun who, through his persuasive abilities, manages to keep us happy and hardworking and our book costs the lowest in the city. Also, thanks to Phil Krol, our Editor-In-Chief for all your hard work. Keep your blinkers open for a snazzy book to start off the millenium.

Joanna Wojciechowska, Leslie Smith, Philip Krol, Laura Kozak, Sara Kalke, Tyler Mills, Lindy VanRiper, Erin Doxsey-Whitfield, Robin Benbow, Talana Tree, Andrew Thompson.

Sara Kalke files away yearbook photos ever-so-sweetly.

INTERNATIONAL SPIRIT

International Week, this year, included a different activity for students to enjoy every day of the week. On Monday, a global fashion show treated all those who attended the assembly to clothing and music from all over the world. On Tuesday at lunch, students with a little spare change were able to sample food at the International Food Fair in the small gym. Many restaurants and students contributed, and everything from sushi to bruschetta was available for only fifty cents a serving. Other International Week activities included a sumo competition where sumo suits provided both bulk and entertainment for many.

The multicultural nature of Canada is brought to every student's attention during International Week. Our increasingly global society requires a sound understanding of how ethnic groups can co-exist to create a peaceful planet. Student's Union and many other volunteers made such an effort possible by using resources from a multicultural tapestry of students.

IN THE SPIRIT OF WINNING

UNPLUGGED WORDS

Through various outlets, Scona students are able to become involved in our many clubs.

In terms of language-based clubs, the LIP and Speech and Debate team serve as the major ones. The LIP is a monthly paper put together by a group of students. All the writing, photos, layout and design decisions are student made and the paper circulates through the entire school.

The Speech and Debate team has also had a very successful year including a trip to Calgary with teacher sponsor Ms. Filan.

SCAM, Strathcona Communications and Media, deals with the changing and growing outlets of communications technology and remains an essential part of Scona's network of clubs.

The Scona awards committee is a important part of the school responsible for LORD awards.

CHECKS & CHEERS

The cheer team is back at Scona after a long time. The new white and red uniforms replaced the nostalgic ever-delightful gold and yellow polyester suits of their predecessors. All members spent many hours practising moves to start a new tradition at Scona. The team, full of pep and enthusiasm, performed at sporting events and cheer competitions. They received a warm welcome from Scona students at the Scona Classic in February. The highlight of the performance was the team's routine to "Pretty Fly" by the Offspring. This sequence created quite a rouse in the crowd. Next year the team looks forward to building on skills and experience gained this year.

INSPIRATIONAL SPIRIT

There's a bumper sticker out there that says: "If you can read this, thank a teacher". We have to give these guys some credit. They put up with us day after day, giving their all. Some coming to school at 6:00am (way before the majority of students have hit the snooze button one last time...), others staying behind until 6:00pm. Our teachers make available and understandable all the knowledge we need to know to pass exams.

However, what defines the teachers at Scona is their spirit and pride in the school. Stories about their past and present adventures are what make going to class a little more enjoyable. Mr. Kulka's stories about his daughters and guitars, Mr. Dreaver's renditions about strange travel experiences, Mr. Cheng's tales of chem lab mishaps, Mr. Farrar's dramatic retellings of situations at past schools. These things are what bring students closer to their teachers and allow us to feel at home while in class, so learning is easy and dare we say, fun? Our hats go off to all teachers at Scona.

Top right: A southern gothic gives a visit to the Robbins' Nest on Halloween.

Now we all know why Mr. Farrar teaches social! He doesn't seem to find the biology Mr. Hill is talking about very interesting.

The two science guys Mr. Kinasevich and Mr. Richards demonstrate some 'bonding'.

SWOOSH

Who's teaching who? Mike Metcalfe and Doug Pearcey show Mr. Frizzell a thing or two on the computer.

Mr. Harle shows the true sacrifices made for the love of sports, especially hockey.

PRINCIPAL'S MESSAGE

Strathcona's long tradition of excellence has continued this year with our students achieving excellent academic results, a number of city athletic championships and fine arts recognition.

We have continued to meet our unique challenge not to accept our accomplishments as being good enough by striving to excell. Our focus this year and in years to come will be to retain our wonderful reputation in the community through the achievements and responsible citizenship of our students.

As well, our school motto, "ut qui ministrat", "as one who serves", has continued to be taken very seriously. Strathcona students recognize they can make a difference to others and they have provided service to our partner, the University of Alberta Hospital, and to a variety of charitable projects through the year.

I would like to thank our yearbook students and staff for producing this excellent record of Strathcona's 1998-99 school year.

SCONA PRIDE TEDDY BEARS

Scona Pride is a fun, challenging and enjoyable club that does school and community work. One of the projects that was very successful this year was Teddy Bears! On Christmas Eve, a group of Scona Pride students were pleased to deliver 222 bears donated by Scona students to the University Hospital, Ronald McDonald House, St. Joseph's Auxillary Hospital, and the Mewburn Veteran's Center.

Scona Pride students brought hundreds of smiles to the faces of patients who had to spend their Christmas in the hospital. When the Scona Pride students handed the patients the teddy bears, it was more than just placing a toy in their lap, it was giving support and encouragement to carry on through another day.

Through the years Scona Pride has continued with projects such as the Teddy Bears and will for many more, with hopes of making many children's Christmases a whole lot brighter.

SCONA SPIRIT AT THE CANADA WINTER GAMES

We all know the Scona Lords have amazing spirit but just how far does this spirit extend? At the 1999 Canada Winter Games in Corner Brook, Newfoundland many Scona athletes proved that it extends at least as far as Canada's East Coast. Between February 20 and March 6, 232 Alberta athletes competed in 21 different sports. Scona's own Adrienne Dube competed in weightlifting and Jason Bisans went for fencing. Some Scona students even managed to bring back medals. Claire Critchley helped her team to gold in the women's cross country skiing relay. Andrea Lessard was also part of Alberta's women's squash team, who won silver. Lindy VanRiper paired up with former Scona Lord William Milroy to win a silver for the mixed doubles event in badminton. In the synchronized swimming event, Lisa Burrows' team came through with a bronze as did Kristen Hagg and Nicole Symington in the women's hockey.

As these Scona athletes were busy fighting for their medals, there was a lot of action going on around them. The Games themselves were sponsored by Pepsi and TSN cameras were a constant presence. An amazing number of services were available to the athletes including free physio, massage, and internet access. Team Alberta was well noticed with royal blue and yellow Sun Ice apparel, which was hot stuff to trade. Also to be desired was the Roots clothing of Team Yukon.

All this hustle and bustle took place under the watchful eye of the Games mascot Tauttuit (pronounced tow-tweet), an Atlantic Puffin. The 1999 Canada Winter Games will be remembered by everyone there as an amazing experience largely due to all the friendly people, especially the volunteers. The Scona athletes who were there all came back to Scona knowing they'd had made an experience to remember.

Y2K

With the approach of the year 2000, the world is plagued with worry over "the millennium bug". The technological revolution has created a world highly dependent on machines, especially computers. All of our banks, stock markets, air traffic control, army technology including nuclear weapons, heating, and other vital resources are computer-controlled.

The more fearful are stockpiling food, buying generators, and even making secret hiding places. The business world has become obsessed with "year two thousand compliancy", buying up new software and employing thousands of computer technicians. Everyone is up to date on the slang, and which of their machines are "compliant". All nations are thinking up their game plan for the big computer crash.

However, the question remains: what is the "millennium bug? It all relates back to the early days of the technological revolution, amidst the dawn of the computer's creation. These new machines were huge and slow, anything and everything that was unnecessary in the memory was deleted. It became a matter of course for computer programmers to shorten the year from four to only the last two digits. The problem now arises with the change from the 1900s to the 21st century. The clocks on archaic computers will think that the change from the year 99 to 00 is actually a reverse in time, rather than a regular advance.

Skeptics of the Y2K crisis ask if computers will actually crash. Critics say that Y2K is just a scam by computer companies to frighten the world into buying new computers and computer programs. Everyone is left with questions of how we let this crisis slip by. What really will happen? We can only wait to see.

SMOKING BAN

When the Edmonton Public School Board proposed a plan to eliminate all smoking allowances on school grounds, the public scoffed. They thought that the matter would be forgotten within weeks, but because of tremendous parental support, EPSB stuck with it. In September of 1998, high schools across Edmonton became smoke-free zones. Citywide, student and teacher smokers were going crazy. Breaks were simply too short to make it out for a cigarette, especially if school grounds extend for blocks.

Scona, however, could be considered blessed with public park within feet of the school. Smoking and being on time remain possible. This slight compromise has left the school's football field cleaner and easier to maintain. Despite this positive aspect of the change, the public park becomes progressively dirtier. The anti-smoking plan has failed. It was meant to ease peer-pressure and aid students in "butting-out" through sheer inconvenience, not cause a shift in smoking environment.

As a result of this change, Strathcona students continue to look at the effects of peer pressure. CALM 20, a required diploma course, deals with issues like smoking, drinking, and drug abuse. The smoking ban from Edmonton Public School Board shows that governing bodies at the municipal level are concerned with the health of the students they educate. Strathcona students may continue to smoke, but measures such as the anti-smoking plan make breathing a bit easier for non-smoking students, and life just that much healthier.

HURRICANE MITCH RELIEF CONCERT

Southern America was devastated by Hurricane Mitch and survivors were left homeless in its wake. Scona decided to help.

Two of Scona's talented bands, LIME and Misdemeanor, held a concert to raise money for the relief fund. Mr. Edgar and Mr. Goldie also did a duet with a banjo in hand. They played through the lunch hour, filling the hallways with the pulse of their music, and the Scona room with students.

The concert raised $525 for the relief fund. A big "Thank You" goes out to all of the students who came out to the concert, and especially to LIME, Misdemeanor, Mr. Edgar and Mr. Goldie for taking the initiative to help out people in need. This is what Scona spirit is all about.

SPIRIT OF THE FUTURE

Good evening parents, teaches, fellow students. It is with both honor and responsibility that I address you tonight. I feel that, granted the opportunity to speak to all those celebrating all their accumulative successes of the past twelve years, I have been offered an occasion to acknowledge the teachers, staff and parents who make such success possible. We are here not only to commemorate our personal accomplishments, but to celebrate that which has enabled us to travel thus far. Truly, our achievements to date are a testament to the atmosphere within Scona, and to the teachers and administration who are so instrumental in fostering that atmosphere. Scona's distinction in scholastics, athletics and in community service have been made possible by that which we hold as tradition; a tradition of respect and of dedication to service; and more importantly, a tradition of pride as individuals within an outstanding institution.

As we approach the year 2000, more than ever before, we are presented with questions which refuse categorization; those which cannot be evaluated sufficiently through conventional approach. These are the questions which are the most complicated; questions not of contingency but of conscience, in which we must be the ones to find ourselves amongst the ambiguity of what may be considered right and what must be considered wrong. We now have the capacity to act internationally, and as such, we assume an international responsibility towards the persecuted; a responsibility which must be perceived not as an option, but as an obligation. The complexities in Kosovo are indicative of such global shift in attitude-the rules are yet unclear, but we forage into the territory of accountability-armed only with the duty to protect the precious life of our fellow human. Thus it is today that we are most immediately accosted with problems obscured by the unknown; problems which defy solution and yet which cannot go unresolved.

Nevertheless, deliberation upon what lies ahead cannot be considered an occasion of despair, on the contrary, it must be perceived as reason of confidence. I believe that our experience at Scona has endowed us perhaps more than we presently realize-with a certain integrity and the capacity for excellence. I believe that one day I will see a member of this graduating class recognized for their contribution to elucidating our situation which, as of yet, lacks definition. Having entered the school in grade eleven, I can attest to Scona's integrity, not only in comparison with the school which I formerly attended, but also in the unforgettable experience that Scona has extend to me. I too was soon absorbed into an atmosphere which exuded confidence and conviction. It is this transition that has enabled me to most clearly recognize that we, as Scona students, can afford to squander neither our individual potential nor the conditioning that we have received during the past three years. We have a responsibility both to ourselves and to those who have made our success possible not to live the future vicariously through the accomplishment of others, particularly when what we possess as a class is so substantial and so unique. We must derive from this precious experience a feeling of individual pride and a sentiment of altruistic responsibility. Ultimately, the respect that we have deserved and that which we have received, must be perpetuated on all of future endeavors; an imperative best embodied in a quotation of Lord Tennyson's: "To strive, to seek, to find and not to yield."

-Alison Ondrus

Kajtek Jaskowiak: Tom! Tom! You have to come back with me!
Tom Yonge: Where? Back to the future?

K: No. It's a lot more complicated this time Tom! I'm taking you... Back to the past! Go ahead, quick get in the time machine.

T: Back to the past? No no Doc, I just got here.

K: Hurry, we don't have much time.

T: Wait a minute Doc! What happens in the past? Did I screw up in high school or something?

K: Exactly. But not you.

T: Doc, I don't get it.

K: Look, what happens to Scona! (Doc presents newspaper.)

T: This is a copy of Scona's newspaper, the LIP. "Scona's Education Topples"-Massive computer disjunction leads to disaster at Scona.

K: That's why we have to go back to September 1996, to your grade 10 year at Scona. Somewhere throughout those three years in high school, something went wrong, causing Scona's computers to malfunction, so no grade 12 student was able to receive their final marks.

T: But Doc, why does it matter?

K: You see, this one event starts a chain reaction that leads to your grade 12 class not graduating.

T: Wait a minute Doc! This date.

This is next months newspaper.

K: Precisely, I already went further ahead into the future to see what else happens. I've back tracked everything to this one event. That is why we must go back to your high school years...

T: Woohoo, this is heavy.

(Doc's watch alarm-"Beep")

K: We're late! Come on!

(T&K run into each other.)

T: High school, here I come again.

T: (comes on stage) Wow, just like I remember it the first time. A bunch of pre-pubescent, slicksters, wearing bone enhancing(cough), I mean, muscle enhancing t-shirts, who overall, have no idea what the next three years have in store for them. I just have to remember what Doc told me about not letting anyone know I'm from the future. I've got to pretend that I'm doing high school all over again. K: (as Kajtek-wandering stage with map upside down) Hi...how you doing?

T: Hey(Gr. 12 high five)Kiii...I, I, I'm new here. What's your name?

K: Me, well um, I'm Kajtek. I feel so much pressure on me right now.

SPRIT OF THE PAST

T: Just relax. Hey, you going to come to all these Welcome Week activities? (looks back at imaginary poster.) I hear the dance is an incredible time and is fully organized by the student's union.

K: Student's Union. Geez, that sounds like a lot of hard work. I could never imagine myself organizing dances, and emceeing school events. Don't tell anyone, but I'm actually scared to death of talking in front of large crowds.

T: Well, for all we know, you may some day be on student's union. Both of us for that matter. You never know what the future may hold.

K: What?

T: Oh, nothing. I'm Tom by the way. Tom Yonge.

K: Well, Tom, I hope to see you again sometime in the next three years.

T: More than you can possible imagine.

K: What?

T: Figure of speech. (Kajtek exits.)

T: (WW dance. Kajtek enters) Hey Kajtek. This welcome week dance is really a blast.

K: Yeah, I'm really starting to let myself go. (Both dance.)

K: You know, we've been at Scona for only a week, and I'm already fitting in. (cocky) See that girl over there by the door? Well, I think she's got the hots for me. (whisper) She touched my hand.

T: Isn't that the girl that stamps everyone's hand?

K: Well, yeah.

T: Score (high five-miss completely but recover. Kajtek exits)

(Report to Doc)

Doc, Doc, this is Tom.

K: (offstage) Tom, is that you? Is everything alright?

T: Yeah Doc, everything's great. Grade 10 was a crazy experience. I learned so much. Like how our green hallways glow like the Aurora-Borealis. (whispering) As for our little computer program. I don't get it. We didn't even have computers for our grade ten registration. We might as well have just been writing on stone. Kind of like the cave men, or our parents for that matter.

K: (comes on stage. Tom rejoins him.) Whoa. Grade 11 has come so fast. One minute we're in grade ten, and the next, we're here at our Grade 11 registration. It's like we've traveled at the speed of light into the future.

T: (aside) How does he know about time travel?

K: Time travel is really cool. That stuff's so fake though.

T: How did he do that? It's like he read my mind. Wow, I'm really hungry. I could go for some...

K: Subway (pulls out sub).

T: Kajtek, get off the crest.

K: Whoa, I totally forgot about the tradition here about not stepping on the school crest.

T: Come on Kajtek, we're no longer little clumsy grade tens.

That is why we have to be role models, leaders, if you will.

K: You're right Tom. We must respect everything and everyone around us.

T: Yeah, I don't know why everyone makes fun of CALM 20. It's one of those courses where knowledge never stops. Like the sun,...shining light upon all of man.

K: Like a tap that is left on,...all afternoon. (both snap out of it)

T: Kajtek, do you realize that this is the last year we can afford to slack off before grade twelve?

K: Shhhhh! Not so loud, Tom. You never know who can hear you. (whispering) what if your parents were listening?

T: My parents, what have they ever done for me? They only have raised me, fed me, clothed me, provided me with shelter, money and education...some people!

T: Seriously though Kajtek, to prepare for grade twelve, we need a symbol of unification. We need a provider, a being with a vision, a goal, with the ability to accomplish.

K: We need someone with a "cool strut".

T: If only you knew what we're in for. (Both exit.)

K: What?

T: Oh, you'll see.

(Report to doc.)

Doc, come in Doc! Well, I've finally reached grade twelve. Grade eleven was awesome, though. We won our 23rd consecutive X-Country city championship, our 12th consecutive swimming championship, and let's not forget, Scona's 27th consecutive city track and field championship. As for our computer crisis, I noticed that Scona finally started using computers for registration. I don't know Doc. We're running out of time, and these teachers really seem to know what they're doing. I'll keep you updated.

K: (Comes in as teacher - extremely frustrated)

T: (side commentary) Hey, there's Mr. Anderson. Geez, he looks pretty peeved. (starts walking away) Maybe he needs someone to cheer him up. (walks up to Mr. A) Hey...Mr. Anderson, why so glum?

K: (whisper) I can't get it to work.

T: What was that? My ears must still be buzzing from all those track meets.

K: I said, I can't get the computer to work.

T: May I take a shot at it?

K: Certainly, ...and good morning.

T: You could say I've handled this sort of high-tech equipment before. (Presses button, and computer turns on Kajtek leaves)

(Doc enters)

T: Doc, we've figured it out.

K: Do you know what this means? It means that the time line has been restored and now you can prepare for your graduation.

T: Now I guess all I have to do is find myself a date.

K: I wish I could help you, Tom, but I'm afraid technology hasn't gone that far yet.

T: (Pulls out newspaper.) Doc, the newspaper, the LIP. It's changed. "Scona Education Tops" Doc, what does this mean?

K: It means, the future hasn't been written yet, so make the best of it. There's still time in your high school years. Use it best you can.

T: (emotional) The last three years. The last three years have been full of memories, good and bad. The most important part is... that we've been through it together, so thank you Scona. Good luck and always take pride in yourselves and the faces you leave behind. K: What do you say Tom, one last photograph.

T: Why not. (Stands behind K.)

K: Good luck in the future.

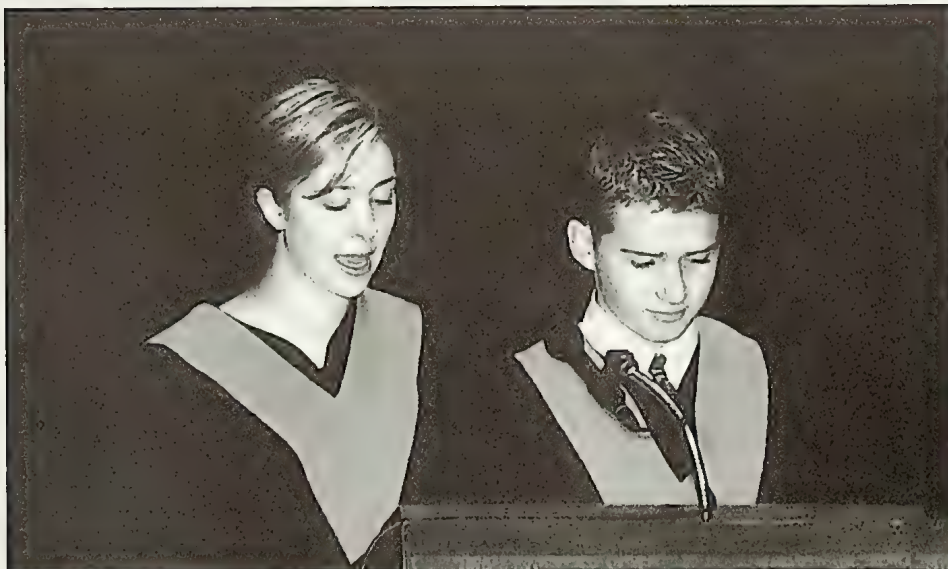

T: Whenever you're ready, Mr. Gerun. Whenever you're ready!

(Flash of light, stage goes dark.) ("Back to the Future" theme.)

Tom Yonge and Kajtek Jaskowiak present a humorous historian's address.

CEREMONIAL SPIRIT

Commencements this year was both a spectacular and sentimental event. As friends and family watched the class of 1999 cross the stage, both memories and expectations were brought to mind.

Alison Ondrus, valadictorian, addressed an issue that plagues every generation; the future. However, the approach of the new millenium leads to further uncertainties and Ondrus did a superb job of both articulating the issue and motivating her graduating class to seek a solution.

Tom Yonge and Kajtek Jaskowiak gave a hilarious re-enactment of the last three years at Scona with inspiration from the Back to the Future cast.

Dance performances by Sarah Lipinski and Jayn McIntosh, Hannah Wensel's cello solo, and a school band's performance gave the audience a brief view of just how diverse the talent is among these students. Other speakers included Meera Shah, Grad President, Mr. Manson, Honorary Grad President, and former Scona Graduate Sheamus Murphy. Genevieve Selfridge and Jeff Shandro emceed.

The real show stealer was Jeanine Garries, accompanied by Jessica Pecush on piano. Her original grad song was carried off perfectly by a stunning voice.

The last class of the millenium has brought to Scona a huge range of individuality and school spirit. While their presence within the school will be greatly missed, it can be expected that they will aspire to many wonderful things.

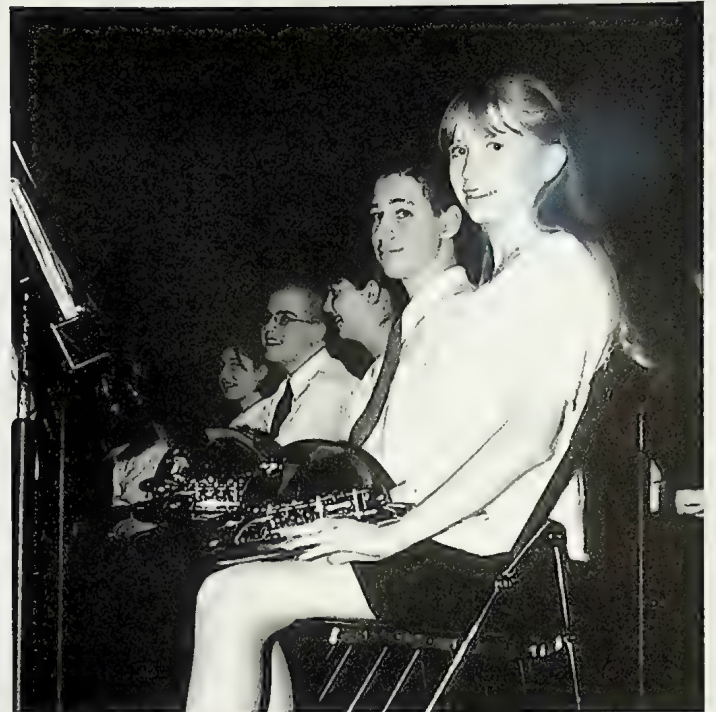

A huge thanks to Mr. Wallace and Mr. Farrar, Grad Committee orgainzers, Mr. Klause and the school band, and all student, parent, and teacher volunteers who made this rite of passage such a spectacular ceremony.

Jayn McIntosh delivers a stunning dance performance.

Grade ten and eleven band members provide the tunes for commencements.

Jenaine Garries and Jessica Pecush steal the show.

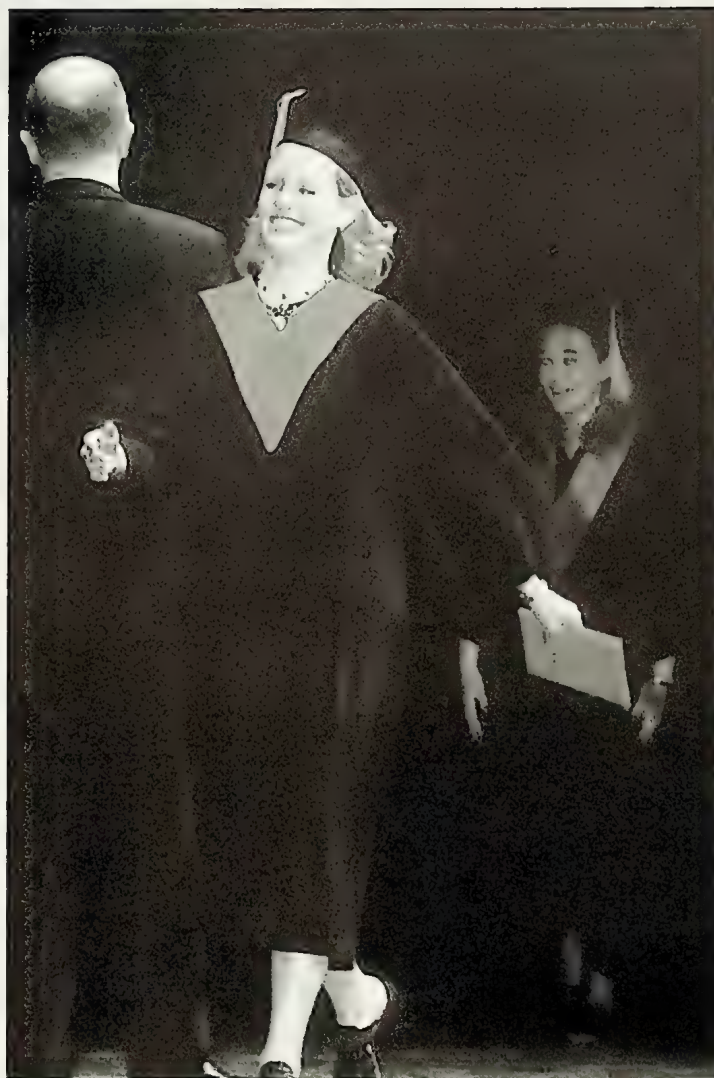

Rob Stewart, Derek Bohl, and Cameron Douglas grin in their graduation garb.

GRADUATION '99

Hundreds of friends and family gathered on the balcony of the Shaw Conference Center to exchange memories of the past three years of schooling together. The sun-dazzled evening foreshadowed the intensity that lay ahead with the banquet.

After the Kodak moments and admiring of each others' suites and dresses, everyone poured into the auditorium. Golden star balloons dressed every other table, dim red and yellow Scona lights lit up the walls, and the head table, from which the evening was directed, all made up the decor. Many toasts took place for the grads and a slide show gave a glimpse of what their final high school year was like.

A couple musical interludes followed by the dinner lead to the final entertainment of the night, the dance. Most students let loose and boogied while some immediately left to experience a different form of celebration at Safe Grad. The banquet was truly a great festivity that will be remembered to commemorate the class of '99.

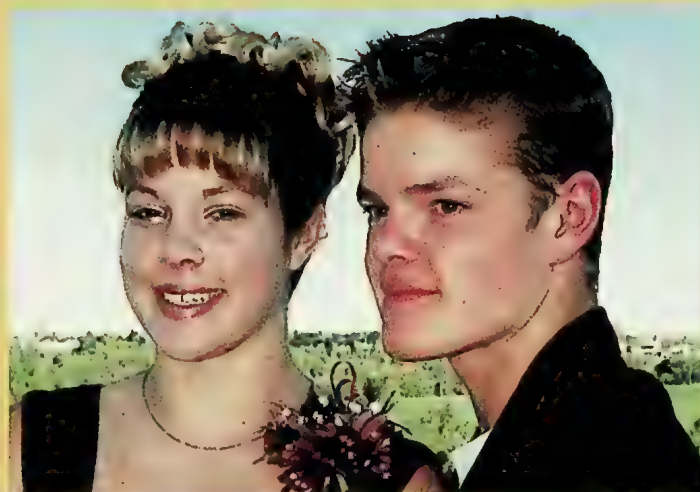

Dan Yarmon plays the drums at the banquet.

Yolande Desrosiers, Sarah Pinto, Elisa Zenari, and Katie Petersen pose for some pics.

Barry Levoir and Sarah Ferguson savor the moment.
